Mr. M. S. Gibson has turned over his entire interest as proprietor of the Preble House, Portland, to a newly organized corporation known as the M. S. Gibson Hotel Company, of which Mr. Gibson is president. It is proposed to build another story on the hotel, thus increasing the number of rooms by about twenty-five percent, over the present capacity, and make other improvements.

Mr. Porter, American Minister at Rome:
A series o' statements addressed to Marquis Imperiali by Marquis Radini was telegraphed from Rome yesterday and published by fine Associated Press of the United States to-day. The only part of Marquis Rudini's communication this Government desires to notice it the one here quoted, namely: "I have now before me the note addressed to you by Secretary Blaine, April 14. Its perusal produces a most painful impression upon me.
"I will not stop to lay stress upon the lack of conformity with diplomatic usages displayed it making use, as Mr. Blaine did not heakate to do, of a portion of the telegram of mine communicated to him in strict confidence, in order to get rid of the question clearly defined in our official documents which alone possess d plomatic value."

The telegram of March 24 concentrics T. White has engaged Messrs. Armour & Co. to give one of their popular beef tea exhibits at his store during Merchants' Week. I. W. Coombs, Esq., will begin work upon his new house which he is to erect on Grove street, this week. When completed it will be occupied by Hon. E. B. Neallev. There will be a meeting of the Watch Circle of King's Daughters connected with the Essex Street Church with Miss Mabel Mills, Garland Street, this evening at 7.30. There are now 950 patients in the State usane hospital, and the institution is so overcrowded that Dr. Sanborn says he will be forced to refuse any more applications

Next Friday is Arbor day, when it is hoped, it will be better observed than it has been by a general planting of trees and shrubs, either by the roadside, in one's yard, or in the orebard and garden.

The entries for the annual meeting of the Waldo Trotting Horse Breeders' Assoand 26, have been made. The State Colt

The infination of Marquis Rudini that the telegram in question was delivered in strict confidence, is a total error. As the telegram expressed the demand of the Italian Government, it was impossible that Marquis Rudial could transmit it in strict confidence. What Will They Be When the New

Hon. A. A. Rueleigh has compiled some valuable statistics regarding the business of the great Aroostook region from which we learn that the total shipments potatoes of the crop of 1891, up to date were about 2,450 car loads. The average number of bushels for a car being about 650, the amount in bushels will be found 1890, the average being about 40 casks to were shipped from Houston and Fort Fairfield from May 1st, 1690, to May 1st, 1891.

Mr. Burleigh says it is remarkable what an increase there has been in the shipments from Aroostook county even with the present inadequate railroad facilities and he ventured the opinion that with the new factory examination yesterday for admis-sion to the bar, for which his friends are tion the shipments the first year would be fully 10,000 carloads from Houlton and Fort Fairfield, to say nothing about the growth which would result from the opening of that line. The Desceners Question After debating the question for three months the New York presbytery has rejected the overture of the general assembly regarding the appointment of deaconesses by a vote of 39 to 21. Three objections were raised 1. That there is ordaining women to official places in the church. 3. That the office of desconess did not arise as early in the church as the advocates of it claim. 3. That woman is already receiving the best of all recognition for the great work she is ac-

HICAGO'S CAPACITY FOR VISITORS— STRANGERS AT THE WORLD'S COLUM-BLAN EXPOSITION WILL FIND AMPLE PROVISIONS FOR THEIR CONFORT. The many exposition will. FIND AMPLE PROVISIONS FOR THERE COMPORT.

During the discussion preceding the action of Congress which selected Chicago as the location of the Columbian Exposition of 1893, there was considerable talk about the capacity of the rival olties in the matter of handling big crowds. That such an event as the World's Columbian Exposition will necessarily attract an unprecedented concourse of people during the entire period of the display, is beyond question. It is nearly twenty years since the Philadelphia Centennial, and the experience of that city proved that an international exposition held in America was the means of drawing quite as big crowds as such an event held in any of the European capitals. Since that date America has progressed with giant strides. The great Western States have increased in population and wealth, at a rate which even so receptly as the date of the Philadelphia Centennial would have been considered next to impossible. The growth of Chicago during that period is but typical of the development of the West. And in regard to the ratio of Chicago's growth, statistics show that if such rate of progress ent municipal limits of Chicago being aiready greater than any other city in the world.

To form an estimate of the probable extent of the crowd which will make Chicago are adaptive and work does not the control of the crowd which will make Chicago the control of the crowd which will make Chicago the control of the crowd which will make Chicago the control of the crowd which will make Chicago the control of the crowd which will make Chicago the crowd which will make Chicago the control of the crowd which will make Chicago the control of the crowd which will make Chicago the control of the crowd which will make Chicago the crowd which will make Chicago the crowd which will make Chicago the control of the crowd which will make Chicago the control of the crowd which will make already greater than any other city in the world.

To form an estimate of the probable extent of the crowd which will make Chicago its dwelling-place during the period of the Exposition, it would therefore be hardly fair to consider the limit of the attendance of the Philadelphia Centennial as the maximum. The largest number admitted on any one day to that Exposition was 211-110; the smallest number, 12,720; the average, 62,333. For purposes of approximate forecast of the demands for room at the forthcoming Exposition, the attendance at the late Plaris Exposition furnishes better dain. From May 6 to November 6, 1889, the life of the Paris Exposition furnishes better dain. From May 6 to November 6, 1889, the life of the Paris Exposition, the stendal number of admissions was 83,149,353, or a daily average of 137,289, the largest better data. From May 6 to November 6, 1889, the life of the Paris Exposition, the total number of admissions was 28,149,353, or a daily average of 187,289, the largest number in a single day being 400,000. In view of the probable magnitude of the Columbian Exposition, and the wide-spread interest in the display, both on the part of the sixty-millions of Americans and the manufacturers of foreign countries, it is only fair to expect that the number of admissions will equal those of Paris.

On the basis of a daily attendance of 130,000 at the Paris Exposition, it is estimated that the actual number of foreign visitors in the French capital numbered 1,500,000. Presuming that every visitor stayed an average of ten days, this would teave the average number of visitors present in the city during the Exposition at 00,000. But it is admitted that during the six months while the Exposition was open the windux of visitors was by no means continuously even. Monster excursions from all parts of Europe would swell the daily arrivals to three or even four times that of the total admissions on the largest day, 401,000, a majority were non-residents of the French capital. Or, in other words, that the City of Paris had at one time to provide for 200,000 visitors.

Will Chicago be equal to the task of entertaining 200,000 visitors:

The natural reply to such a query will present itself by reference to what Chicage has done in the past. On the occasion of great National Conventions the capabilities of Chicago hospitality has been tested in a manner that may be taken as a basis of what will be done during the Exposition. The most recent of such gatherings, the liepublican National Convention of 1888, ofters the most reliable data in point. On that occasion representatives from every State in the Union, accompanied by large delegations of citizens actracted by political reasons, or from motives of curiosity made Chicago their point. On that occasion representatives from every State in the Union, accompanied by large delegations of citizens actracted by political reasons, or from motives of curiosity, made Chicago their home for the greater part of a week. Extimates based on railroad statistics figured the number of visitors present at one time at 200,000, but this is probably an exaggeration. A most conservative minimum would be one-half of this number, 100,000. But in connection with the visitors at that political gathering, it is a notable circunstance that the proportion of female population was exceedingly small and that the politicians who comprised the assemblage made a point of crowding as close to the convention hall as possible. The location of that meeting place being in the heart of the city, it followed that the vast majority of visitors found quarters almost exclusively in the hotels. As a natural result of such overmouding in one spot there were many inconveniences which visitors willingly amented, in the shape of caricatures which pletured Chicago's visitors sleeping in freight cars, woodsheds, cupboards, sidewalks, and in fact in every conceivable uncomfortable siteation which the facetions invention of humorous correspondents could imagine. But the evidence of the same correspondence furnished to a Chicago newspaper at the close of the convention dispeted whatever misgivings might exist as to Chicago's capacity to care for her guests. Moreover, it was shown on those days.

wherever in givings might exist as to Chicago's capacity to care for her guests. Moreover, it was shown on those days when the crowd was thickest, a surplus of when the crowd was thickest, a surplus of sleeping secommodations were for rent in every quarter of the city.

Criticism, whether humorous or serious, however, confined itself solely to sleeping accommodations. The hotels and restaurants were fully equal to the demands made upon them in the way if extering to this vast multitude. And it is regually true that if one-half of the visitors had ubesen to take their meals outside the hotel section of the city, there would have been little or no difficulty in supplying their wants at the thousands of boarding-houses with a racius of three or four miles from the center of the city.

All this, however, being more or less in the nature of conjecture, a few statistics may be worth quoting in answer to the question, How will Chicago entertain her maniaut the Exposition? Were that event question, How will Chicago entertain her guests at the Exposition? Were that event to occur in the course or the pressed year instead of two years hence, visitors to Chicago would still find ample seconmodations prepared for them. In Chicago, to-day, there are by actual count 1,463 botels, with a total capacity for 135,600 guests. The floating transient population of the Chicago hotels is estimated at about 65,000, so that there still remains a surplusage of comfortable accommodations for 70,000 people. These figures, bowever, do not by any means include the possibilities of hotel accommodations, or any such inconveniences as were voluntarily acceptthe of hotel accommodations, or any such inconveniences as were voluntarily accepted by visitors to the Republican convention of 1888. If the capacity of every hotel in the city were tested, as were the down-town hotels on that occasion, it would be no exaggeration to say that four times this number could find sleeping accommodations. It is not, however, to be expected that visitors to an exposition will care to put up wich the same inconveniences as were encountered by the politicals in attendance at the convention. A visit to the exposition will average at least a week, and the visitor who succeeds in viewing all the wooders of the colossal display during that time will needs be astirearly and late. Moreover, the persent at the exposition will bear no comparison with the few who attended the political convention.

ed at that time will be out of the question. Outlying hotels will undoubtedly be filled throughout the life of the Exposition, throughout the life of the Exposition, in addition to the hotels, however, the facilities of the Western metropolis in carring for visitors are still more than adequate to the possible requirements. A conservative estimate of the boarding-houses p laces the figures at 18,000, offering socommodations for 50,000 visitors. An equal number of guests could find sleeping accommodations in the thousands of tenement houses or fists, where one or two spare rooms are usually to be rented.

Thus it would appear that, however heterogenqua the throng of visitors may be, in every respect, there will be ample accommodations for at least a quarter of a million.
